Arafat will be head of new state

Palestinians to proclaim independence next month

CAIRO, Aug 15, (Agencies): The Palestine Liberation Organisation will proclaim the birth of an independent Palestinian state in the Israelioccupied territories next month, with Jerusalem its capital and PLO chairman Yasser Arafat its head of state, Egypt's Middle East News Agency said today.

The agency, in a Cairo-datelined dispatch, said it obtained a copy of the "independence document" calling for the establishment of a Palestinian state on territory allocated by a 1947 UN partition plan for an Arab state.

The agency, said the provisional government of the new state will be prepared to open peace negotiations with Israel, presumably within the framework of an international con-ference on Middle East peace. The proclamation, MENA said, will be made by the leader-

Iraq co-operating fully with UN peacekeepers

BAGHDAD, Aug 15, (Reuter): Advance parties of Canadian military observers and signals experts arrived in Baghdad today as the United Nations assembled teams to monitor a ceaselire in the Iran-Iraq war.

Diplomats and UN officers said the Iraqi government had co-operated fully with efforts to get the UN Iran-Iraq Military Observer Group (UNIIMOG) in place for the formal end to the eight-year war on Saturday. "Only one day after the ceasefire announcement (on Aug 8), the Iraqis had produced several white-painted vehicles for UN use," one diplomat said. They are really moving fast." Thirteen Canadian military observers flew into the Iraqi capital overnight and a UN officer said: "The first complete military observer contingent came today."

On the same flight were two men from Canada's 88th Signals unit, the first of 485 Canadians who will set up a communica-tions network for the 24-nation UN ceasefire team.

Signals

A Canadian diplomat said the signals unit would send a second advance party tomorrow, with the main body due on Thursday. A group of 12 signallers earlier reported to have arrived was delayed by a hitch in transport arrangements, he said.

Military observers from Senegal were due to arrive in Baghdad late today and 11 Norwegian observers were expected

Officials from the Hungarian and Bangladesh embassies in Baghdad said 15 observers from each country were due in the Iraqi capital within 24 hours Most of the countries involved in the ceasefire force said their troops would be in the Gulf by Wednesday.

Yugoslav Major General Slavko Jovic, appointed to com-mand the Iran-Iraq Military Observer Group (UNHMOG), is expected in Iraq tomorrow.

Khamenei urged the armed for-ces today to remain on alert because the diplomatic war with Iraq would be just as dangerous as the military one.

The Iranian news agency IRNA, quoted Khamenei as saying during a tour of the war fronts that Iraq had tried to portray Iran's acceptance of Security Council Resolution 598 a month ago as weakness.

"Everybody who sits at a negotiating table should rely on his military power or else he should not dare to negotiate,' the agency quoted him as saying.

Iranian fishermen headed home

MANAMA, Aug 15, (AP): Five the US Navy eight days ago from their drifting dinghy in the Gulf of Oman, were finally headed home today after an unexpected hopscotch tour of four warships.

US military sources said the five were to be turned over to Omani authorities at Goat island in the Strait of Hormuz, and then transferred to Iranian diplomatic officials' control.

The five were picked up on Aug 8 by the US missile cruiser Vincennes, and said they had spent eight days adrift after their fishing boat sank.

They were without food, and their water supply had run out. US military doctors said they were suffering from exposure, dehydration, and body rashes, and probably could not have survived another 24 hours.

The Vincennes mistakenly shot down an Iranian civilian ietliner.

When ordered on "another mission," according to US sources, it turned the five over to the missile cruiser Texas, which kept them aboard until they could be moved to the frigate Fanning.

From there, the five were shifted again to the missile destroyer Robinson, which was to take them to the Omani base in the Hormuz Strait.

The military sources, noting that the exchange took longer than anticipated to arrange, said the actual turnover was expected to take place late today.

"After 15 years of working a three-shift system there," Loskutova says, "my stomach is wrecked... my kids grew up without me, for their mother was either working or sleeping it off after night shifts."

Because of the tremendous war losses among soldiers in World War II, women today comprise 52 per cent of the population of 286 million, and almost all work. Low Soviet salaries and high divorce rates also force women in to the work-

"What leisure time have I?" Loskutova asked. "Washing, cleaning, cooking, dishes, redecorating. I can never remember doing any relaxing in the house. Soviet industrial life is hard on women who find it next to impossible to remain feminine.

Loskutova appeals to the party newspaper to fight to improve the plight of ordinary Soviet women.

British hostages are 'alive'

LONDON, Aug 15, (Reuter): A Church of England official who met an Iranian diplomat said today he was confident Anglican envoy Terry Waite and two other British hostages were alive.

"I am optimistic that he (Waite) is alive and that the other British hostages are alive. As to whether anything is going to happen quickly, I am rather more cautious," John Lyttle said after holding five days of talks with the diplomat in London. Lyttle also attended a first day of talks between the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr Robert Runcie, and Mohammad Reza Mohammadi, an Iranian Foreign Ministry official. The talks, held at the Archbishop's London residence of Lambeth Palace, were the latest in a series of diplomatic initiatives by Runcie to try to gain the freedom of his envoy.

Waite was kidnapped in Beirut in January 1987 while trying to negotiate the freedom of Western hostages, believed held by pro-Iranian groups.

"We believe they (the Iranians) do have very considerable influence. And they say so themselves," Lyttle said in a radio interview. The Church said after the talks ended last night that they had been conducted in an open and relaxed manner. 'We now look to Iran to use all its undoubted influence in Lebanon to help to bring about the release of Brian Keenan, John McCarthy and Terry Waite," the statement ended.

SIXTY-FIVE per cent of the electricity produced in Kuwait is used to run air-conditioners during the summer, according to Electricity and Water Minister Homoud Al Roobah.

Rqobah urged Kuwait's residents to ration energy and water consumption to avoid imposition of higher rates.

The problems of electricity overload are due to what he described as extravagance in lighting and cooling consumption. Consumption

He explained that electricity consumption for lighting is only 50 megawatts from the overall load compared to 2,600 megawatts out of 4,000 for air-conditioning which drops to 1,400 megawatts during winter.

Potential

Further east, the river systems that supply Israel, Syria, Jordan, Turkey and Iraq with much of their water are a potential source of conflict, according to a recent American study.

The upper Jordan river is already fully exploited, and Syria and Jordan have announced plans to build a so-called Unity Dam on its tributary, the Yarmuk. But a Syrian plan to divert water higher up the Yarmuk could stem the flow through the Jordan river basin that sustains important agriculture in both Israel and Jordan, according to a study published early this year by the Centre for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, DC

Dams on the Tigris and Euphrates rivers being built by Turkey could also sharply curb the water flowing to Syria and Iraq. Turkey's ambitious Anatolia project anticipates 13 hydroelectric and irrigation projects on the upper reaches of those rivers. With Syria also drawing off water, the flow from the two rivers to Iraq could be reduced by two-thirds.

Sharing and conserving the water requires co-operation in a region more known for rivalry and conflict, the study points

Follow the Yemenis

ANOTHER local newspaper yesterday called on the Arab states to follow the example of the two Yemens in encouraging removal of all barriers blocking free movement of citizens and capital.

"The experiment of the two Yemens can be expanded and promoted as a fact of life and a sign of progress and civilisation," the daily said in reference to the recent joint Yerneni move.

North and South Yemens have allowed their citizens to cross the borders with the identity cards alone. They have also sanctioned the free movement of capital and joint investment of the natural wealth in the two sectors.

The newspaper hoped for similar initiatives in the Arab world, abolishing passports and borders and allowing Arabs to move freely from one part of the Arab world to the other.

Prague Spring anniversary

Communist leaders appear uneasy

By Alison Smale

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, (AP): Czechoslovakia's communist leaders appear uneasy about the upcoming anniversary of the August 1968 invasion that put them into power and crushed "Prague Spring" liberal

The state-run media has made a series of attacks on former Communist Party leader Alexander Dubcek and other men prominent in the 1968 attempt to create "socialism with a human

The adoption of that slogan by none other than Mikhail Gorbachev makes it hurder for Prague's leaders to assert that current reforms in the Soviet Union have nothing to do with Dubcek's policies two decades ago.

The similarities between Gorbachev's and Dubcek's ideas has buoyed the hopes of some dissenters in Prague that there will be change once the awkward anniversaries of 1988 - this fall marks 70 years since the founding of a democratic Czechoslovakia in 1918 - are past.

Revise But Soviet Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov signalled in July that Moscow is not yet ready to revise its official view that the 1968 invasion was needed to stop Czechoslovakia from pulling out of the communist bloc.

Ryzhkov said nothing critical about Dubcek's specific policies. but Czechoslovak hardliners immediately took a harsher tone toward 1968's ousted leaders.
On July 14, the party daily Rude Prayo attacked writers and journalists who had promoted reform in 1968 in what some saw as a veiled warning to current Czechoslovak journalists not to imitate the recent frankness of the Soviet media.

On July 16. Rude Pravo accused Dubcek of taking advantage of Gorbachev's reforms to demand his own political rehabilitation. The mer leader, now a retired forestry worker in Bratislava, as a Five days later, in a regular feature the party daily ran "the yellowish pages of 1968." A worker charged that the leaders of 20 years "seduced thousands of people who believed them, and then left them high and dry (without support).'

However, Western diplomats and dissidents wonder if the official tactic of discussing 1968 to discredit its leaders will actually revive interest in the "Prague Spring."

Most of Czechoslovakia's 15.5 million people retreated into private life and the pursuit of material wealth after Dubcek was ousted as party leader and replaced by Gustav Husak in Husak's own replacement last December has given them little faith in the tentative economic reforms now being attempted in Prague. Milos Jakes, who took over as general secretary, was responsible for the purge of 500,000 party members in the

So far, there is little sign that the Aug 21 anniversary of the invasion will provoke public protests. Known dissidents have received police warnings against action and some plan to spend the day in country retreats rather than in police detention in the capital.

Security forces also have been vigilant of some Western journalists in Prague, making a full copy of one reporter's notes and dogging others' movements

Appeals

A new, independent peace group claiming about 60 members is distributing underground appeals calling on citizens to dress in the red, white and blue colours of the Czechoslovak flag

Non-dissenters concede the occasion evokes powerful emotions, but are quite certain there will be nothing like the spontaneous outpouring of protest that drove thousands onto the streets when Soviet and other Warsaw Pact tanks arrived in 1968.

Marcos still a leader somewhere

By Robert H. Reid

LAOAG. Philippines, (AP): In his traditional stronghold in the northern Philippines, Ferdinand Marcos remains a pervasive, respected figure more than two years after a Manila-based uprising toppled his 20-year authoritarian administration.

"I tell you that if he ran again, he would win hands down here." said Rafael Benemerito, mayor of the Ilocos Norte province town of Pagudpud, "You know. we Ilocanos are very clannish."

In most of the Philippines, the Marcos years are associated with massive corruption, economic mismanagement and oppression. But in his native Ilocos Norte province, Marcos still enjoys widespread respect among his fellow Hocanos.

President Corazon Aquino has refused to allow Marcos to return to the Philippines from his exile in Hawaii, even to attend the funeral of his mother. Marcos fled to Hawaii after the February 1986 uprising that propelled Aquino to power. Pro-Marcos activists now speak of Marcos returning as a private citizen, rather as a challenger to take back power.

Rewarded

Marcos was the first llocano to reach the presidency. He rewarded his home province, which has a population of about 440,000, with roads and development projects. Ilocanos are strongly represented within the armed forces, although precise figures on their numbers are unavilable.

Rep. Roque Ablan, a pro-Marcos Congressman, claims allegations of massive corruption during the Marcos years and the embezzlement of up to $10 billion have not significantly dented support for the ousted leader.

"In spite of all the accusations and charges, we still look up to Marcos." Ablan said. "We would like to see him come home. which is the right of every Filipino.

Not every llocano is a dedicated Marcos lovalist, Communist rebels have made strong inroads in Ilocos Norte since 1981. The military estimates there may be as many as 500 regular members of the communist New People's Army.

But the spirit of Marcos looms heavy over this province about 250 miles (400 kms) north of Manila. Rural bus stops and walls of buildings in the provincial capital Laoag still bear graffiti such as "No to Cory" or "Marcos once more," his slogan in the fraud-tainted 1986 elec-

"People here still respect Mar-cos," said the Rev. Ruben Abaya, a Roman Catholic priest in Batac. "They would like to see him come home, although not necessarily as president. They

Price

Mrs Aquino refused to allow him to come home, and the mother remains unburied. Still. rumours that Marcos will come home soon persist.

The province's association with Marcos has not cost it a big price under the new administralion. Provincial Gov. Rodolfo Farinas said the Aquino government has not discriminated against Hocos Norte in the allocation of state funds.

UNRWA plays assertive role in Gaza Strip

By George D. Moffett III

GAZA CITY, Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip: As political confrentations go in these hot days of the Palestinian intifada (uprising), it was hardly a major incident.

A United Nations official encounters Israeli soldiers beating a 10-year-old Palestinian. The boy had been caught during a stone-throwing demonstration in the Gaza Strip.

But, instead of remaining uninvolved, the UN official attempts to rescue the youngster. In the process, he gets roughed

"I usualiy don't play the role of cop," this official, a foreign national, explained later. "But when a kid is being beaten up you can't just stand by and watch."

The incident occurred recently. It is a small but telling sign of the assertive new role being played by the UN Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA), the agency that for nearly 40 years has quietly been meeting the health, education, and nutrition needs of tens of thousands of Palestinian refugee families. Today, UNRWA has become a kind of impromptu human rights monitor, tracking arrests and protesting perceived abuses by Israeli soldiers. This higher profile since the intifadah began last December is welcomed by Palestinians. They say the agency is the lone line of defence against alleged abuses by the Israeli Army.

Strained

But the role has strained already difficult relations with Israel. UNRWA, because of its far-flung network of services, is often described as a kind of surrogate government - with its own agenda, many Israelis say --in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank.

UNRWA has helped to incite the situation," one Israeli com-plains. "The philosophy underlying the curriculum (of UNRWA's 250 primary and junior high schools in the West Bank and Gaza) is 'You are all here temporarily. You will eventually go back to your home in

"We're like a married couple who hate each other but because of the children we have to stay together," one senior UNRWA official says of the agency's uneasy relations with Israel.

UNRWA officials are openly critical of the collective punishments dealt out by the Israeli Defence Forces to crush the eight-month uprising.

"Recently we had no food, no electricity, no water for two complains one UNRWA official at Bureij camp. which was closed down after the head of the village council resigned in response to a demand by the leadership of the Palestinian

"No one seems to understand that it's the children who are the first victims of the policy."

Resent For their part, the Israel soldiers resent what they see as unnecessary meddling by UNRWA in essential security operations.

So far, says one UNRWA official in Gaza, no letter protesting cruelty has ever been answered by the Israeli government Meanwhile, a new team of mobile UNRWA troubleshooters has been formed since the intifadah, in part to respond to confrontations. Agency foreign national usually moderates the behaviour of Israeli soldiers.

"I try to get close enough to the soldiers but not so close to the (Palestinian) kids that I incite more violence," says one of the new "regional affairs officers" whose unenviable job puts him squarely in the middle of the Arab-Israeli crossfire that has taken more than 200 lives since

The official says that most contacts with the soldiers are professional and polite. But during the last two months, there have been increasing incidents of verbal abuse, threats, and, in three recent instances, physical resistance to UNRWA officials who have intervened to stop beatings.

Protection "Personally, I see our role more as one of protection than in terms of relief," says this official.

"The fact that kids are getting knocked around, that's what's so hard to get used to.

Israel has had little real choice but to tolerate the presence of UNRWA, which picks up an annual $100 million tab for its work with 750,000 Palestinian refugees living in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. (Israel donates $300,000 annually to UNRWA.)

With 7,500 employees in the territories, UNRWA is the second largest employer there after the Israeli civil administration. All but 25 are Palestinians.

Since 1950, UNRWA has provided subsistence levels of sanitation, medical care and relief for Palestinian refugees living in the overcrowded refugee camps and towns in the Gaza Strip, the West Bank, Jordan, Syria, and Lebanon.

income

Roads have been built and houses electrified, but UNRWA has carefully avoided crossing the line between relief and development work.

The reason: Palestinians say improvements that would give the camps a feeling of permanence that would implicitly signal acceptance of the 1948 partition of British-administered Palestine that led to the creation of Israel. All but 4 per cent of UNR-WA's income comes from voluntary contributions made by governments, nongovernmental organizations and private individuals. The UN pays the balance.

For many individual Palestinians. UNRWA is said to have become the charity of choice, since dollars to the UN agency guarantee that the intifadah will be nourished at its roots, in the refugee camps where the uprising began. Since the start of the uprising, several governments have loosened their purse strings to contribute $65 million in emergency contributions.

The United States, on the other hand, has recently trimmed its contribution by $6.5 million - a move that many UNRWA officials see as sending a clear political message to the Palestin-

Six million dollars taken from Israel's (US aid contribution of) $3 billion wouldn't have made a dent," complains one UNRWA staffer. "For us it's 10 per cent" of the US contribution of $61 million. The Christian Science Monitor

Republican convention Bush's chance to

By Milchael Gelb

NEW ORLEANS, (Reuter): As he nears the Republican presidential nomination he first set his sights on nearly 10 years ago, Vice-President George Bush is still struggling to emerge from Ronald Reagan's shadow. Political experts in both parties, including the vicepresident's own strategists, say his Thursday night acceptance speech could be crucial in his effort to establish himself as his own man in voters' eyes.

"His speech will give the American people a chance to look at Bush in an unvarnished manner in which he can convey his views, his beliefs and his criticisms of (Democratic presidential candidate) Michael Dukakis," said Peter Teeley, the top press adviser to Bush for most of the past decade until he left his campaign post in May.

"For the first time, people will see him outside the shadow of Ronald Reagan," he said. Bush's choice of a viceesidential running mate, which he plans to announce on Thursday morning, is also regarded by many experts as a key test.

But the country is simultaneously enduring a boom in schemes, scams and swindles. For those willing to play fast and loose, substantial gaps in what the government calls the "socialist commodity economy" are just asking to be filled.

In freewheeeling Shenzhen, a "special economic zone" near Hong Kong two dozen "Buddh-ist monks" with hand-made gowns were arrested recently when police learned they were actually farmers masquerading to beg for alms.

In southern Guiyang, 200 women complained to authorities that "Sun brand cosmetology freckle syrup," a face lotion, abruptly darkened their skin. One shocked husband sought a divorce. The fly-bynight manufacturer changed products.

And when a student drowned in a lake in Henan Province last month, local fishermen demanded nearly $300, his family's entire savings, to search for the body.

"In recent years the trend of putting materialistic interests before morality and justice has emerged in Chinese society, it noted. "A trend towards putting the individual first has appeared."

The government has reacted with intermittent crime crackdowns and media criticism, but seems hard put to contain the

The most criticized offenders today are corrupt officials taking advantage of looser restrictions and personal power, like some caught buying pork at state-controlled prices and reselling the prized meat on the free market. In Beijing, authorities have set

RUNNING MATES

RABAT, (Reuter): Spain's former colony of Western Sahara, the land of the "blue people", is a bleak and almost featureless strip of desert in the western bulge of Africa claimed by Rabat as historically part of Morocco.

By Stephen Hughes

After a bitter 12-year desert war, its future depends on the United Nations' ability to organise a referendum to decide whether the people want to be independent or part of Morocco. New proposals handed to the two sides in the conflict, Morocco and the Polisario guerrilla movement, by UN Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar on Thursday call for a ceasefire and a referendum. They are to reply by Sept 1. For centuries the territory has been home to small nomadic tribes who roamed over vast areas in search of meagre pasture for their camel herds and flocks of goats.

They became known as the blue people when a Scottish merchant named Donald McKenzie sold them cheap indigo cloth made in Manchester from a trading post on a rocky islet near the indigo dyed their skins blue. McKenzie's trading post was shut down by Sultan Moulay Hassan, the present King Hassan's great-grandfather, on the grounds that the Scot was trespassing on Moroccan territory.

The Moroccans say the incident is one fact proving that Western Sahara has always been considered an integral part of Morocco. Muslim tribes there have also always paid allegiance to Moroccan monarchs revered as descendants of the Holy Prophet Mohammed (PBUH).

In 1975 King Hassan took the issue to the World Court in The Hague which ruled that although some tribes traditionally pledged allegiance to Moroccan monarchs this did not constitute sovereign rights.

The World Court's opinion was that sovereignty should be admission violated the selfdecided by consulting the local population in application of the principle of self-determination.

But King Hassan decided the court's findings vindicated Moroccan claims. He organised the "Green March" (green symbolises Islam) and 350,000 unarmed Moroccans waving flags and copies of the Holy Quran were

War After the last Spanish soldiers left at the end of the following February, guerrillas of the Frente Popular Para la Liberacion de Sakiet el Hamra y Rio de Oro (Polisario) backed by Algeria and Libya began a war of attrition for independence of their self-styled Saharan Arab Democratic Republic (SADR). The guerrillas eliminated Mauritania whose small Army was unable to resist Polisario raids deep into its territory, twice attacking the capital Nouakchott itself

As the uprising in the Israeli-occupied territories continues, Palestinian women take a radical appraisal of their role in the struggle.

ECOGNITION by an enemy recognition indeed. In June he Israeli occupation authrities closed down a major 'alestinian charity in the West 3ank, run by women for vomen and their families, and erving nearly 15,000 people.

And on July 1 the Israelis racked down on the more ecent popular committee movement, making it illegal for anyone to take part. Palestinian women are also a najor force in the popular movement, whether in Enwomen's committees or in medical, agricultural, and neighbourhood committees.

Palestinian women are fully involved in the intifada (uprising) in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, now in its eighth month. Present attitudes are a far cry from the past. "Honour before land," they said in pre-1948 Palestine, and some families did flee the fighting to protect their women's honour. They did not think this would lead to a 40-year exile from their land.

Today, Palestinian women doctors join their male colleagues in breaking the cur-few to treat the injured in the villages. As Dr Jumana Odeh puts it: "No one thinks about whether they like it or not; we just have to do it." Their families worry if they are kept out overnight because of clashes, but not about the women's behaviour or honour. Role Even the older women's traditional role of homemaker has taken on a political dimension: home-based food production, leading to slow disengagement from the Israeli economy, is a key aim of the upris-ing. Teaching also carries a new dimension. Mary Khass, a Palestinian educator in Gaza told a recent conference in Oxford that during curfews women arranged home-based education and other activities.

It was especially important, Khass said, to keep the smaller children calm during clashes. They wanted to imitate their older brothers and sisters, but they suffered greatly from fear: "When the Israeli jeeps wine, they huddle in a corner; when the jeeps are gone they are heroes." But not all the little ones are frightened.

into my room. Go away!"

By now, close to 300 Palestinians have been killed by bullets, rubber bullets, beatings or teargas inhalation since the intifada began. Of the dead, many women have been imprisoned.

Some women, like the journalist Nahida Nazzal, have been gaoled under the notorious "administrative detention" procedures, which effectively allow for six months in prison without trial (thousands of West Bankers and Gazans have been interned under these procedures). Just how deep-rooted are the changes in women's roles? Often, women have participated in a war effort or national liberation movements only to find that, at the end of the conflict, they are expected to return to the home to carry out the same traditional tasks (women in Britain have only to think back to the days of the First and Second World Wars). But this is unlikely to be the case with Palestinian women, because of the way they mobilised before the uprising tool place. From the 1920s until the late 1970s over 200 charitable organisations were set up in the West Bank and Gaza, most run and managed by women.

Many of these "traditional" societies were very successful. They served not only as an outlet for women's energies but also provided badly needed services for deprived sectors of society and income-generating projects for women were more

A target of oppression

ON June 20 at 1 am, Israeli Army officers hauled a 65-yearold Palestinian grandmother, Samiha Khalil, from her West Bank home and took her to the offices of the charity which she founded and runs.

There, the commanding officer read her a two-year closure order. Mrs Khalil, who founded the Society for the Family (Inaash al-Usra) 23 years ago, refused to sign the Hours later, the Society's offices and production units were shut down, and only the orphanage and kindergarten were allowed to function — but the kindergarten's kitchens were also sealed and welded force and none of the organisation's senior staff were present. The Army broke into the building terrifying the 123 girls in the orphanage. They confiscated files, documents, and video tapes, breaking down the doors to get in. No receipts were given for the materials, which included an old box of Palestinian flags from before the Israeli occupation of the

Inaash al-Usra of "brainwashing" children with anti-semitic propaganda, and of being a major centre for teaching the slogans and goals of the

At her own press conference later the same day, Mrs Khalil denied these charges: "We refuse to teach our children any kind of hatred ... on the contrary, we extend a hand of friendship to the Jews.

The closure of the Society means economic hardship for nearly 15.000 people. Inaash al-Usra is the first major charitable institution to be shut down by the occupation authorities." It was registered as a charity under Jordanian law, the registration being carried over after the Israeli occupation of 1967. Mrs Khalil has dedicated her life to the Society, at great personal cost. A widow, she has spent years under town arrest, without being charged, and has been unable to travel to see her children, all of whom live

Two of her children, deported by the Israeli occupation forces, are not allowed to visit her. She was even unable to attend her son's funeral in the Jordanian capital, Amman, last year. Still, Mrs Khalil and her colleagues have persevered, building the Society into the institution it is today from modest beginnings in a garage with one used sewing machine and a loan of £200. Now, in addition to some 150 full-time employees, 4,800 women are engaged in embroidery work in their homes for the Society to sell abroad.

Earn

Many women earn nearly half their family's income in this way.

To break the Society's dependence on fund-raising, a biscuit production unit was set up, and soon contributed to the charitable projects like the orphanage. A sewing factory was just about to find its financial feet.

The Society also sponsored many cultural projects, including a Palestinian museum.

Equally important, the Society helps some 1,300 needy families with money each week; they will now be deprived of this vital source of income. Others who will suffer include some 200 women who attend the Society's vocational training programmes.

Mrs Khalil was due to speak at a conference on the West Bank and Gaza in Oxford in July; she was not allowed out of the country to attend (she has been unable to travel to over 40 conferences during the last eight years).

Her paper was distributed during the conference. In it she makes no secret of her belief in the justice of the Palestinian cause, and her determination to carry on.

"If they close the door in our face, we will enter from the window; if they close the window, we will drill through the roof and enter to continue our path," she said.

"They may refuse to give us permits, or allow us to bring in money; they may impose black-outs on the media and the press; and they may limit and even prevent our movement. But we firmly believe that the people's determination will overcome any repression."

egalitarian in outlook.

The new women's committees reached out to villages and refugee camps, but tried not to impose irrelevant urban models on the women from these areas.

Response

Rather, women were invited to develop a local response to the problems they faced. The villagers and refugee camp women then formed their own committees, sending representatives to the head committee.

Over the last decade, a threefold message has reached women through these committees: organise to improve your societies, organise to protect your rights in the family, and organise for national libera-

As one of the women puts it: "If a woman is going to par-ticipate only in the national struggle, she'll have to start at square one after liberation." The uprising has also been characterised by unprecedented unity, the groundwork for which was also laid over the past decade. For example, women from the new committees co-ordinated with the older charities, although their approaches differed.

It is this spirit of co-ordina tion and self-reliance that has enabled the West Bank and Gaza Palestinians to sustain a high level of what is effectively a non-violent struggle (only four Israelis have been killed in intifada-related incidents). In spite of the Israeli claim that the uprising is over, there are at least 50 clashes and demonstrations a week coupled with regular allout strikes.

One West Banker summed up the women's view: "We are struggling against the occupa-tion at the same time as we struggle against a certain male domination. We are not prepared to return to things as they were before."

popular lecturers on Royal Viking Line bridge cruises, internationalist Ron Von der Porten. He feared, correctly, that a low diamond lead would present declarer with his game-going trick, so he chose to look elsewhere for his opening salvo. He decided that the card least likely to cost a trick was the king of spades! Declarer won the ace and ran six hearts, discarding three spades and a club from hand. East echoed in clubs and also discarded a spade and a diamond while West let go three diamonds. South could still have made the contract by leading a spade, since the opposing spades were now 2-2 but, convinced that West had started with K-Q-10, that didn't even cross his mind. Instead, he led a diamond to the queen. Von der Porten took his king and continued his fine defense by exiting with the king of clubs. That assured the defenders of five tricks—one in each black suit and three diamonds when East was able to push a diamond through declarer's J-9.

While we admire West's handiwork, let's not forget to pat East on the back for his thoughfulness in signalling in clubs to show possession of a high card.

EVERY afternoon, as they were coming from school, the children used to go and play in the giant's garden.

It was a large lovely garden with soft green grass. Here and there over the grass stood beautiful flowers like stars, and there were twelve peach-trees that in the spring-time broke out into delicate blossoms of pink and pearl, and in the autumn bore rich fruit. The birds sat on the trees and sang so sweetly that the children used to stop their games in order to listen to them. "How happy we are!" they cried to each other.

One day the giant came back. He had been to visit his friend the Cornish ogre, and had stayed with him for seven years. After the seven years were over he had said all that he had to say, for his conversation was limited, and he determined to return to his own castle. When he arrived he saw the children playing in the garden.

"What are you doing here?" he cried in a very gruff voice, and the children ran away.

"My own garden is my own garden," said the giant; "any one can understand that, and I will allow nobody to play in it but myself." So he built a high wall all round it, and put up a noticeboard which read, "Trespassers will be prosecuted."

He was a very selfish

grant.

The poor children had now nowhere to play. They tried to play on the road, but the road was very dusty and full of hard stones, and they did not like it. They used to wander round the high walls when their lessons were over, and talk about the beautiful garden inside. "How happy we were there!" they said to each other.

Then the spring came, and all over the country there were little blossoms and little birds. Only in the garden of the selfish giant it was still winter. The birds did not care to sing in it as there were no children, and the trees forgot to blossom. Once a beautiful flower put its head out from the grass, but when it saw the noticeboard it was so sorry for the children that it slipped back into the ground again, and went off to sleep. The only people who were pleased were the snow and the frost. "Spring has forgotten this garden, they cried, "so we will live here all the year round. The snow covered up the grass with her great white cloak, and the frost painted all the trees silver.

"I cannot understand why the spring is so late in coming," said the selfish giant, as he sat at the window and looked out at his cold, white garden; "I hope there will be a change in the weather."

But the spring never came, nor the summer. The autumn gave golden fruit to every garden, but to the giant's garden she gave none. "He is too selfish," she said. So it was always winter there, and the north wind and the hail and the frost and the snow danced about through the trees.

One morning the giant was lying awake in bed when he heard some lovely music. It sounded so sweet to his ears that he thought it must be the king's musicians passing by. It was really only a little linnet singing outside his winnet singing outside his window, but it was so long since he had heard a bird sing in his garden that it seemed to him to be the most beautiful music in the world. Then the hail stopped dancing over his head, and the north wind ceased roaring and a delicious perfume came to him through the open casement. "I believe the spring has come at last," said the giant; and he jumped out of bed and looked

What did he see? He saw a most wonderful sight. Through a little hole in the wall the children had crept in, and they were sitting in the branches of the trees. In every tree that he could see there was a little child. And the trees were so glad to have the children back again that they had covered themselves with blossoms, and were waving their arms gently above the children's heads. The birds were flying about and twittering with delight, and the flowers were looking upthrough the green grass and laughing. It was a lovely scene, only in one corner it was still winter. It was the farthest corner of the garden, and in it was standing a little boy. He was so small that he could not reach up to the branches of the tree, and he was wandering all round it, crying bitterly. The poor tree was still covered with frost and snow, and the north wind was blowing and roaring above it. "Climb up! little boy," said the tree, and it bent its branches down as low as it tree, and then I will knock down the wall, and my garden shall be the children's playground for ever and ever." He was really very sorry for what he had done. So he crept downstairs and opened the front door quite softly, and went out into the garden. But when the children saw him they were so frightened that they all ran away, and the garden became winter again. Only the little boy did not run for his eyes were so full of tears that he did not see the giant coming. And the giant stole up behind him and took him gently in his hand, and put him up into the tree. And the tree broke at once into blossom, and the birds came and sang on it, and the little boy stretched out his two arms and flung them round the giant's neck, and kissed him. And the other children, when they saw that the giant was not wicked any longer, came running back, and with them came the spring. "It is your garden now, little children," said the giant, and he took a great axe and knocked down the wall. And when the people were going to market at twelve o'clock they found the giant playing with the children in the most beautiful garden they had ever seen.

All day long they played, and in the evening they came to the giant to say good-bye.

"But where is your little companion?" he said:
"The boy I put into the tree." The giant loved him the best because he had kissed him, and had not been afraid.

"We don't know," answered the children; "he has gone away."

"You must tell him to be sure and come tomorrow," said the giant. But the children said that they did not know where he lived, and had never seen him before; and the giant felt very sad.

Every afternoon, when school was over, the children came and played with the giant. But the little boy whom the giant loved was never seen again. The giant was very kind to all the children, yet he longed for his first little friend. "How I would like to see him!" he used to say.

Years went by, and the giant grew very old and feeble. He could not play about any more, so he sat in a huge arm-chair, and watched the children at their games, and admired his garden. "I have many beautiful flowers," he said, "but the children are the most beautiful flowers of all "

One winter morning he looked out of his window as he was dressing. He did not hate the winter now, for he knew that it was merely the spring asleep, and that the flowers were resting.

Suddenly he rubbed his eyes in wonder and looked and looked. In the farthest corner of the garden was a tree quite covered with lovely white blossoms. Its branches were golden, and silver fruit hung down from them, and underneath it stood the little boy he had loved.

Downstairs ran the giant in great joy, and out into the garden. He hastened across the grass, and came near to the child.

And the child smiled on the giant, and said to him, "You let me play once in your garden, today you shall come with me to my garden, which is paradise."

And when the children ran in that afternoon, they found the giant lying dead under the tree, all covered with white blossoms.

Western diplomats in Baghdad who have been advising their governments to exercise caution but not abstention from Iraq's market, suspect that very little if any of the estimated $35 billion Iraq owes to Arab countries will be repaid or is expected by creditor countries.

The analysts believe that the Arab states may write off the debt as an investment in war effort. If Iraq was to generate maximum revenues to repay its Arab creditors it would have to maximise its oil production. This, in turn, would have a disastrous effect on oil prices, hurting other Arab OPEC members. Although the debt to the Soviet-bloc creditors, estimated to be in excess of $5 billion, will have to be repaid eventually observers believe that terms of repayment will show some flex-

Debts

Iraqi debts owed to the Soviet Union, Baghdad's military equipment supplier, and the Eastern bloc will probably be repaid in oil and would therefore be less painful and less pressing than foreign currency transfers to OECD countries.

Baghdad also appears to have taken particular care not to alienate Britain. Iraq made orderly and timely payments of principal and interest and even refrained from taking up maximum credit offered by the Western power.

Britain, which enjoys a longterm relationship with Iraq, was one of the first countries to grant Baghdad a loan in 1984 and has continued to offer new loans. The latest is a credit line of £175 million made available in September 1987.

Exports Total Iraqi medium term debt to the United Kingdom is estimated at $1.4 billion. The volume of Britain's exports to Iraq has fallen in keeping with overall reduction in Iraqi exports, say the analysis. They point out that the drop in Britain's exports is offset by a comfortable trading and credit relationship between the two countries based on manageable levels of debt_

Analysts note that several countries have been able to reschedule and in some cases clear up entirely various outstanding payments. Baghdad met its commitments toward New Zealand by repaying on time last April $30 million representing Iraq's total debt to that country.

If payments to Sweden and Holland proceed as scheduled new credits will be forthcoming from both of these countries. Austria, however, continued to ding amounts totalling about $100 million.

Confidence in Iraq's ability to repay loans offered in 1983/84 faltered in 1986 when Baghdad failed to meet some of its commercial obligations, missing interest payments and defaulting letters of credit. Vast imports and an unfounded hope at the time of an early end to the Gulf war forced the country into a position of impartial insolvency and its commercial partners to reconsider trade with the Arab states.

Since then Iraq has taked measures to set its economic house in order and has improved its payment position.

Economy growing at a non-inflationary pace

Japan under pressure to raise interest rates

TOKYO: Aug 15: Among the economic superpowers, only Japan has resisted raising official interest rates recently. But the pressure on Japanese monetary authorities is building, reports the Wall Street Journal.

Economists and other analysts here say the US Federal Reserve Board's decision last Tuesday to boost its discount rate by half a percentage point to 6.5 per cent is the latest and strongest in a sequence of factors that eventually could prompt the Bank of Japan to raise its own discount rate. Some predicted an increase could come later this month if the dollar continues to soar. A discount rate is the interest central banks apply on loans to financial institutions. While shifts in a discount rate often lag interbank or commercial interest-rate changes, they are an important indicator of the longterm direction of interest rates.

For now, market watchers said the monetary policy of the Bank of Japan, the country's central bank, is focused predominantiy on exchange rates and the possible inflationary effect that could result from a decline in the value of the yen.

Most Japan's imports are denominated in dollars, and any increase in the dollar's value could translate to higher prices at increase

The dollar already is hovering just below its 1988 high of 135.70 yen. Economists said that if it moves significantly above that level, it could force the Bank of Japan to consider raising its official rates, to complement a recent but gradual tightening of interbank rates. Helped by news of the US discount-rate increase, the dollar finished on Wednesday in Tokyo at 134.92 yen, up

 1.34 yen.
 Officially, Japan's monetary stance remains restrained. Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, who has opposed Bank of Japan intervention to support the yen, said after the US rate-increase that he sees no need for a shift in Japan's monetary policy. The Fed's rate increase, which brings the US discount rate to its highest level in more than two years, caught Japanese financial markets off-guard. "Nobody predicted this," said Richard C. Koo, an economist at Nomura Securities Co.'s research unit.

Despite the fresh impetus provided by the Fed's rate however, many analysts believe Japanese authorities have ample room to manoeuvre without resorting to a discount-rate increase. Still, if Japan does go that route, according to Teruo Shinato, a money-market economist at Fuji Bank, the Fed's action clears away a possible obstacle to a matching move by Japan. Since last October's stock-market crash, Japanese authorities have been wary of leading the US in official rate increases for fear of aggravating market jitters.

Threat

Such worries haven't prevented West Germany, Britain and the US from boosting their rates recently, mainly because domestic inflation concerns have loomed larger for them than for

Aside from the inflationary threat that could be posed by a significantly weaker yen, the most crucial condition is the widening gap between short-term money market and interbank rates and Japan's official discount rate, which has stood at 2.5 per cent since April 1987. On Wednesday, the Bank of Japan allowed money brokers to raise the one-month interbank rate 0.125 point to 4.125 per cent. Certificates of deposit with three-month maturities now bear interest of between 4.9 per cent and 5 per cent, and Japan's economy is growing at a noninflationary pace. During the first half of the year, according to estimates by Nomura, the economy grew 7.3 per cent, while consumer prices edged up only about 0.5 per cent.

Despite the economic reasons for an official rate increase, analysts said Japanese politicians may have reasons for opposing higher rates. The government now is promoting a major tax package that includes a 3 per cent consumption tax.

Higher interest rates will tighten money supply and could make the tax barder for smallbusiness men to take.

BP to begin new exploration drive in Iran

UK interests likely to do best in Iraq

British companies could take a substantial share of the vast trading opportunities which would open as Iran and Iraq start a reconstruction programme to repair the ravages of the war. according to a report published

The prediction comes from international and multi-lateral companies race to seize the new trading opportunities, the Times newsp .per said.

It pointed out that Iran has invited British companies to take part in Tehran's trade fair starting on September 13.

It is expected that more than 20 British companies will attend and among them are likely to be electrical generating machinery makers, the paper added.

In the meantime, the Baghdad fair later in the year is expected to take about 45 British companies to Iraq seeking orders, double the number at the fair last year.

The trade experts predicted that British interests are likely to do best in Iraq because of the business links that have been maintained during the eight-year war, and help which has been given including substantial lines of credit.

However, they also believe that there would be still significant trading with Iran in the post-war era.

Britain had 10 per cent of the Iraqi market last year. UK exports to Iran were worth even more at £300 million for 1987, compared with £400 million in 1981. The Times noted that the first DUBAI, Aug 15, (Reuter): Iraq is reopening its trade centre in Dubai, closed three years ago after a series of Iranian attacks on ships in the Gulf, an Iraqi embassy official said yesterday.

Fed move right for economy, says Baker

WASHINGTON, Aug 15, (Reuter): Treasury Secretary James Baker said today the Federal Reserve Board's increase in the discount rate last Tuesday was the right move to preserve economic growth and hold down inflation. Baker, asked in a television interview about the half-point increase to 6.5 per cent. said: "The Federal Reserve has done a good job in preserving the balance — which, after all, is their fundamental responsibility between maintaining growth on the one hand and being vigilant against inflation on the other." He added: "I think that's what they were doing this week." Baker is to leave the Treasury post this week to head Vice-President George Bush's presidential campaign. The increase in the discount rate, which the board said was made to reduce inflationary pressures, was unexpected as it came just a few months before the presidential election and analysts said it may burt Bush's chances against his Democratic rival Michael Dukakis. The Fed's action has been followed by private bank rate increases and is expected to trigger higher interest rates for consumers buying home and cars. Despite these effects, Baker said that "in the medium and long term it (the Fed action) will be a very good thing for the American economy and ermit us to continue this very successful expansion without inflation well into next year."

Jordan takes measures to boost investments

AMMAN, Aug 15, (Reuter): Jordan said yesterday it had taker. steps to encourage investment and boost exports and had eased protectionist measures on several local commodities. A statement from the prime minister's office said bans on importing some locally-produced goods, including food products, detergents and batteries, would be lifted and replaced with import tariffs. Import bans would be retained on some other items, including tomato paste, tobacco, fresh milk and cheese, mineral water and salt. The statement said the cabinet had also decided to offer tax incentives for investment in productive fields. A special department would be created in the Trade Ministry to deal with investment inquiries by local and foreign businesses. The cabinet asked the Central Bank and the Finance Ministry to prepare a draft law on export guarantees and to study the feasibility of providing credit to Arab and foreign exporters of Jordanian goods. Jordan's main exports include potash, phosphates, glass, eggs, and processed food.

South-East Asian producers to co-ordinate on oil prices

JAKARTA, Aug 15, (Reuter): Ministers from Indonesia, Bruner and Malaysia will meet on the Indonesian resort island of Bali next Saturday to discuss closer co-operation between the three South-East Asian oil producers, officials said today. "I will look into the possibility whether the three countries can set up a coordination forum, not necessarily an organisation, but just a consultation forum," Indonesian Energy Minister Ginanjar Kartasasmita told reporters. He said it was Indonesia's job, as part of contacts by Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries with non-OPEC producers, to meet Brunei and Malaysia. "The three of us will meet in Bali to discuss the current development in oil prices. . . . We will also discuss how to promote co-operation between OPEC and non-OPEC producers effectively, and the co-operation between the three South-East Asian oil exporters," Ginanjar, who is a member of OPEC's five-member price com-

Belgium slashes budget deficit

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Aug 15, (AP): The centre-left government reached an agreement in principle to further reduce the budget to 7 per cent of gross national product next year, officials said today. Under the accord, the 1989 budget deficit should not exceed 403 billion francs ($10.1 billion), forcing the government to issue new austerity measures totalling 66 billion francs ($1.65 billion). No details of the new bi available until Prime Minister Wilfred Martens has informed King Baudouin on the final text on Monday. Martens, who has been seeking to slash the deficit from 13 per cent of GNP to 7 per cent since 1982, has led a centre-right coalition before leading the current coalition of Socialist and Christian Democrats — both split in Dutch and French-speaking parties — and a Dutch speaking autonomy party since the spring.

LONDON, AUG 15, REUTER - MONEY MARKET INTEREST RATES WERE AS NUCH AS 1/8 POINT FIRMER IN LATE TRADING AFTER A MUCH LARGER THAN EXPECTED TWO PCT RISE IN U.K. RETAIL SALES FOR JULY. A RISE OF AROUND 0.7 PCT HAD BEEN EXPECTED BY THE MARKET AND THE ACTUAL FIGURE WAS SEEN AS UNDERLINING FEARS OF RISING INFLATIONARY PRESSURES IN THE BRITISH ECONOMY.

U.K. JUNE INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION DATA SHOWED AN UNEXPECTED 0.25 PCT FALL WHEN A RISE OF 0.4 PCT WAS EXPECTED BUT DEALERS NOTED THE OUTPUT FIGURES ARE NOTORIOUSLY ERRATIC. THE BENCHMARK THREE MONTH INTERBANK RATE WAS 1/8 POINT FIRMER AT 11-3/8 1/4 PCT.

Nigeria approves import of refined petroleum products

LAGOS, Nigeria, Aug 15, (AP): The military government of this OPEC nation has approved the importation of refined petroleum products to meet an anticipated shortage caused by the closure of a northern refin-

The Kaduna Refinery was shut down today following a fire in a 366-mile (600-kilometre) pipeline that brings crude oil from the oil-rich south.

The fire prompted fears of a shortage of petroleum products in the north, but the Nigerian National Petroleum Corp. said today it was given permission to import refined petroleum pro-

A corporation statement described the pipeline fire as catastrophic, and added its cause has not been determined. The relinery was expected to remain. closed at least until the end of August

Even the import of refined products was not expected to avoid a crunch in the north because of problems with the transport and distribution system in Africa's most populous

Calculating error prevents $1.2b in federal spending

WASHINGTON, Aug 15, (AP): White House budget experts made a calculating error that will prevent Congress from enacting $1.2 billion worth of social services next year.

The error was pointed out to congressional aides in the last few days by the agency that committed it — the White House's Office of Management and Bud-

OMB officials confirmed this past week that the mistake had been made, and said they had told congressional staff members about it.

OMB's error came in estimating how close spending programmes enacted so far come to the $146 billion deficit ceiling for next year that is set in the balanced budget law.

Estimate OMB's official estimate is that Congress still can spend $1.8 billion before the deficit ceiling is reached, even though the agency now concedes the figure should be $3 billion.

In the context of the $1.1 trillion federal budget goes, $1.2 billion would barely register a tick.

But the amount is significant because it means that Congress will have to squeeze spending for anti-drug programmes, the homeless, the hungry and other popular causes under a $1.8 should be a $3 billion limit. OMB officials, questioned about the error, said it was an honest mistake.

Asked how it was made, OMB spokeswoman Barbara Clay said, "we don't know."

But the blunder could cause friction between lawmakers trying to choose among what they see as competing spending necessities, and administration officials arguing that the federal deficit should be kept as low as possible.

Rep. Leon Panetta, who is expected to become chairman of the House Budget Committee next year, said that if the spending pressures are too great, Congress may have to consider leg-islation that would free up the $1.2 billion.
"If it's an error and does not reflect in fact where we stand, it's an option that should be considered," he said.

But in a prepared statement, administration budget director James C. Miller III said he would "oppose any tinkering" with the law "for purposes that would increase the deficit."

Under the law, OMB analyses the economy and federal spending and revenues several times annually, projecting how much red ink is likely in the coming fiscal year.

Wall Street stocks eased after other figures showing that US industrial output rose a strongerthan-expected eight tenths of one per cent in July.

That reinforced a view that the US economy is still expanding briskly enough to warrant concern about inflation and possibly higher interest rates to pinch off spending.

Down

At midday in New York the Dow Jones industrial average was down 17.43 points at 2,020.09. Dealers said trading was thin ahead of Tuesday's trade figures with few buyers to absorb sell orders.

London's FTSE index of 100 blue chips closed down 26.6 at 1,1816.8, its lowest since June 2. The market was depressed by fears that British bank interest rates may have to rise from the present II per cent to cool a fevered consumer spending

The government announced that sales in British shops rose two per cent to a record in July. Other figures showed a decline in output from Britain's own factories in June.

Boom

The consumer boom was fuelled by tax cuts earlier this year and by easy credit. It threatens both higher inflation and, as imports rise, a burgeoning trade gap.

The combination of a surge in UK retail sales for July and a fall in UK June industrial output fuelled concern about inflationary pressure in the British economy and pushed shares lower today, dealers said.

Dealers said selling pressure today was fairly light, but noted the UK banking authorities were in a difficult position regarding interest rate policy. While higher interest rates could dampen consumer demand, they could also increase costs to producers and impede industrial expansion.

Today's data showed July retail sales rose a provisional seasonally adjusted two pct in July after being unchanged in June. The July figure was well centred on an increase of around

UK industrial output fell a provisional seasonally adjusted 0.85 pct in June after an upward revised 0.94 pct rise in May.

But dealers warned about reading too much into one month's statistics. Market analysts Jerry Evans at County Natwest said "I wouldn't put too much emphasis on today's industrial production figures, there's been strong growth over the past three months.

money markets rates showed the key three month interbank sterling rate up 1/8 point to 11-3/8 1/4 pct. Money dealers said the rise was caused by today's economic figures, which underlined concern about Currency dealers said the dollar was marking time ahead of tomorrow's US trade figures.

A deficit much bigger than May's $10.9 billion would be negative for the dollar. Good figures could send it back to 19month highs of around 1.92 marks which it touched in a powerful rally last week.

OPEC could solve thorny quota problem

NICOSIA, Cyprus, (AP): OPEC chairman Rilwanu Lukman is optimistic that the oil organisation's major problems -- persuading Iraq to accept a produc-tion quota and the UAE to stick to its quota — can be solved, an oil industry newsletter said

Lukman, Nigeria's Minister, said in an interview with lan Seymour, editor of the Middle East Economic Survey, that solving the thorny quota problem would cut output by OPEC's 13 member states by up to 1 million barrels of oil per day.

"Judging from the way Sheikh Zayed spoke, we expect they will do something. Even if it were to reduce to, say 1.2 million barrels a day, it would help."

He added: "We are agreed that these are temporary production ceilings in order to solve temporary problems and the ques-tion of permanent quotas will be addressed later on.

"Such an assurance coming from the head of state himself is surely a positive sign that they are prepared to exercise restraint as regards production. Realistic

The UAE has said that 1.5 million barrels a day was a more realistic quota for the seven-state Gulf federation.

Lukman admitted "it would be foolhardy not to worry about" the UAE action.

"If they ... get away with it, it will open up a Pandora's box among the other member countries. The agreement states that if any one country violates the agreement, then others should be free to do the same," he stressed. OPEC's overall quota, excluding Iraq, is pegged at 15.06 million barrels a day. But Lukman estimated that production is currently running at 18.3-18.5 million barrels a day. ......

inflation under control account deficit of £5.6 billion ($9.6 billion), compared with a £1.6 billion ($2.6 billion) deficit in all of 1987. The current account includes such "invisible" trade as services and overseas investment earnings. In his budget speech, Lawson had forecast a trade deficit of £4 billion ($7 billion) for all of 1988. "Things have deteriorated," said lan Harwood, an economist at the London investment firm Warburg Securities. "The major part of the reason for the deterioration has been the way the economy has been growing so much faster than expected."

David Owen, an economist & with the London investment firm Kleinwort Grieveson Ltd., said: 'At the moment, domestic demand is just growing too quickly for its own good."

The latest survey conducted by the polling organisation Market and Opinion Research International, showed that in July, for the first time since February, 1987, more people thought the state of the economy would get worse rather than better over the next year.

Policy

Economists expect Britain's gross domestic product - its total output of goods and services — to grow between 3.5 per cent and 4 per cent this year, faster than the 3 per cent forecast by Lawson in March. This follows growth of 4.4 per cent in

On top of the troubling symptoms, there have been recurrent reports of a rift between Mrs Thatcher and Lawson over currency exchange policy.

These have been fuelled by the pound's rise and the government's negotiations with Thatcher's former economic advisor, Sir Alan Walters, for him to return to her Downing Street office next year.

RIYADH, Aug 15, (KUNA): The Gulf Investment Corporation has been committed to invest in ten projects in 1987 involving financial requirements totalling nearly $800 million. said the corporation's latest annual report for the year. In addition, the report said another 33 projects are currently under active consideration. Since its inception, the Gulf Investment Corporation has undertaken the evaluation of 91 potential projects in member states of the Gulf Co-operation

Council The GIC is owned equally by governments of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, UAE, Qatar, Babrain and Oman.

Strength

Its prime tasks are to develop the GCC states' economic strength through the diversification and expansion of their economic and industrial resources.

According to the report, as of December 31, 1987, the corporation's total assets were $1,560 million as compared to $1,311 million at the end of 1986.

Investments in securities reached a total of $782 millions and placements with banks were 738 millions.

Despite the difficult conditions prevailing in the world fin-ancial markets during 1987, and the stock market crash, the report indicated that net income of the corporation for the period ending December 31, 1987, was $42.4 million. This represents a return of eight per cent on paid up capital. The general assembly decided to distribute a dividend of seven per cent on paid up

TORONTO, Aug 15, (Reuter): Top-ranked Ivan Lendi threatened to walk out on his match against Kevin Curren yesterday but reconsidered and then went on to win his fifth Canadian Open tennis title.

Lendl, who did not drop a set in this bardcourt warm-up for the US Open, defeated Curren 7-6(12-10) 6-2 to take the $119,700 winner's prize. Curren earned Disputes over line calls marked the first set tiebreaker. With Lendl up 5-3 in the tiebreaker, the South Africanborn Curren tucked a forehand passing shot in the corner for a winner to move within a point of the Czechoslovak.

Remove Lendl, who thought the ball was long, asked chair umpire Richard Ings to remove the lineswoman who made the call, but he Lendl then sent a topspin lob long to allow Curren to level it at 5-5. Curren, frustrated at a twominute delay in which Lendl argued the earlier call, faulted on his next serve but Ings awarded Curren a let and warned Lendl about stalling.

Lendl responded by stalking to his seat and threatening to forfeit the final. "Take that (point) away or I'm not coming back," Lendl yelled at Ings. "She's (the lineswoman) screwing up the match.

Curren won the controversial let point to go up 6-5 but could not put the set away. He squandered a second set point at 8-7, before Lendl finally won the breaker when Curren touched an easy volley into the net.

Curren, still upset, doublefaulted to lose his service in the first game of the second set. Lendl broke through again to go up 5-2 before serving out to end the two-hour match.

The victory boosted Lendl's career prize earnings to $12.7 million and ensured his world number one status for a 153rd successive week. Lendl is chasing the all-time record of 160 straight weeks at the top set by Jimmy Connors.

Curren said he was frustrated with Lendl's stalling in the 20-minute-long tiebreaker. When it drags on it becomes a bit of a distraction. When it reoccurs, and you're waiting and waiting it's frustrating," said "But Ivan's a fair player - he doesn't usually argue calls unless he feels he has a case. But you do have a little leverage when you're Ivan Lendl and you're number

"I just felt in a match like this there weren't any reasons for innacurate calls, I didn't understand why the umpire didn't overrule some line calls."

The top seed said he would be in favour of using an electronic device to officiate the sport.

"I'm for it more than 100 per cent," Lendl said. "We don't have hand timing anymore in track and field, why should we have human error in tennis? If we could find a (electronic) system, I'd be happy to accept it.'

Lendl steamed through the tournament without dropping a set in victories over Americans Todd Witsken and Jay Berger, Australian John Frawley, American veteran Jimmy Connors and Curren.

A stylish yet reclusive figure, he dwarfed the Italian motor racing scene with a career that saw his world-famous Formula One cars reap nine World Championships - a feat unmatched by any other stable.

A former racing driver who started to make cars under his own name in 1943 at a small factory at Maranello, south of Modena in northern Italy, Ferrari once said: "My real pas-sion was never to drive cars but to

After more than 30 years of producing Formula One win-ners, the 'Magician of Maranello' still put in a regular working day and always kept a close eye on the day-to-day running of his racing team.

However in recent months he had been seriously ill with kidney problems and rarely left the family home here. He was 90 when he died yesterday. Despite his passion for cars and racing, Ferrari rarely travelled outside his bome town, preferring instead to follow his team's performance on television and by telephone from the shelter

The drivers who piloted his cars read like a motor racing Hall of Fame — Alberto Ascari, Juan Fangio, Wolfgang von Trips, Mike Hawthorn, John Surtees, Niki Lauda, Michele Alboreto and Gerhard Berger.

Despite his success, Ferrari was often at the centre of bitter controversy following the many fatal accidents involving his drivers. He stood trial in 1957 on manslaughter charges but was acquitted on all counts.

A string of crashes which killed many of his best drivers in the 1950s and 1960s prompted the Vatican newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, to describe him as "a modern Saturn who continues to devour his sons." His life was strongly affected by the loss in 1956 of his adored muscular dystrophy made him withdraw into a semi-reclusive rivate life from which he fully re-emerged.

LONDON, Aug 15, (Reuter): Former captain Duleep Mendis raced to a morale-boosting century as Sri Lanka settled for batting practice and a draw on the final day of their three-day match against Surrey at the Oval today.

Americans will swim to most golds, says coach

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug 15, (Reuter): American swimmers will be competing next month in their first Olympics against East Europeans since 1976 and US Olympic coach Richard Quick is confident they will win most

"I won't give a specific number, but we will win more than any other country." Quick said after the US Olympic trials last weekend. "I think we're going to have as strong an Olympic team as we've

Despite his optimism, Quick does not foresee a repeat of the 1976 Montreal Olympics when the US won every men's event except one and claimed top two places in all but two men's individual races.

Assured

"There's no doubt the world has caught up with American swimming," he said. "The challenge used to be to make the Olympic team because in about 90 per cent of the cases a swimmer was almost automatically assured of winning a medal. Those days are gone.

Coach Quick said he thought the Olympic results were likely to follow the pattern of world records because "it's probably going to take a world record to win in Seoul.

Of the 26 Olympic individual events, the US have active swimmers with world records in 10 East Germany in West Germany two and Hungary two.

At the six-day US Olympic trials, three world records were set, two by David Berkoff in the 100 metres backstroke and a new 100 metres freestyle standard by Matt Biondi.

Twelve American records also fell at the University of Texas

Swim Centre. "We will probably see more records in the Olympics than we did in the trials," said Quick.

Here the kids were trying to qualify in every event they could. When they get to Seoul, for most of them, they will be in only one or two events and can really concentrate on those." Besides Berkoff and Biondi, a leading US favourite for Olympic gold is 15-year-old Janet Evans, who dominated the women's distance events at the trials and set an American record in the 400 metres individual mediev.

Bruno confident of victory

LONDON, Aug 15, (Reuter): British heavyweight Frank Bruno is confident that 30 rounds of sparring with Mike Tyson six years ago will help bring him victory over the American world champion in their title fight at London's Wembley stadium.

"He's going to get murdered not me," Bruno said today at a press conference to launch the October 8 fight. A 60,000 crowd paying £4.5 million ($7.6 million) is expected at the fight, with television rights boosting the total considerably. Refused Tyson is to get a percentage of the takings and is guaranteed $4 million, but co-promoter Terry Lawless refused to give details of how much the British challenger would receive. Bruno dismissed previous defeats by two other US heav-yweights - James Bonecrusher Smith and Tim Witherspoon. "When they beat me I was a young boy. Now I am a man with hairs on my chest and the wind is not blowing them off," he said, "The fight is about power and I'm one stone heavier than

Bruno, immaculate in a dark blue suit, dismissed criticism that he will stand no chance against the awesome power of Tyson, who demolished former champion Michael Spinks in 91

"I sparred 30 rounds with Tyson about six years ago when I was training in the Catskill mountains and I have wanted to fight him ever since," he said. Some say Tyson is a tiger, some say he is a baboon. I just think he is a human being," he told a television interviewer. Bruno was backed up by John Morris, secretary of the British Board of Control

"In no way is Frank a lamb to the slaughter. He will prove the most worthy of all Tyson's challengers," he said. It was not beyond the bounds of possibility that the fight would produce "the biggest upset in boxing history.

Approach Bruno failed in a previous world title bid when he was stopped by Witherspoon in the ninth round, but he said that would not affect him in his approach to the battle with Tyson. "It's not if I win it's when I win. I'm going in there with confidence."

There is no man who is unbeatable."
